

Capitol Hill Club

MEMBERSHIP. COMMUNITY. LEGACY.

The National Republican Club of Capitol Hill, also known as the Capitol Hill Club, is a five-story clubhouse with 2 restaurants and 14 private meeting rooms.

The Capitol Hill Club has a rich heritage. The concept of a national social club for Republicans began as the dream of the late New Jersey Congressman, James C. Auchincloss, in 1950. Auchincloss and a group of 100 founding members from 22 states formed the nucleus of what has become the nation's premier political club. Beginning with the purchase of historic Capitol Hill property where the Library of Congress Madison Building stands today, the group opened the first clubhouse in 1951. The original row house where Club members met was known as the Dewey House. Eleven years later, the Club moved to more spacious headquarters at the Congressional Hotel located at 75 C Street. Since 1971, 300 First Street SE is home to the Club, just one block from the U.S. Capitol grounds.

The Clubhouse is decorated in the Federalist style and has the largest collection of Judge prints in the world – these are a collection of chromolithograph prints dating from 1880-1930. The Eisenhower Lounge alone boasts 458 elephants of the Club's collection as well as an 1887 Steinway. There are various other treasures housed here including Republican leadership portraits and historical artifacts.

From its inception, members of the Capitol Hill Club have included the nation's most influential people – Presidents and Vice Presidents, GOP Members of Congress, Governors, state party leaders and influential Republicans everywhere. Guests of the Club include the aforementioned as well as international leaders, celebrities and friends from both sides of the aisle. We invite you to be among them.
